

Biographical Information

Christopher S. Hudson

International Division Vice President & Commercial Director
Corning Display Technologies

Chris Hudson has served as the commercial lead for Corning Display Technologies since October 2014 and was named international division vice president in September 2017. In this role, he has global responsibility for display pricing, forecasting, market intelligence, product line management, and communications.

Chris joined Corning in 2001 as a market analyst in Corning Lasertron. Following the divestiture of Corning Photonics to Avanex, Chris held roles in strategic marketing, product line management, and competitive intelligence. Prior to his current role, Chris served as commercial director for High Performance Displays (HPD), where he led a commercial organization responsible for the development and implementation of customer and product strategy, commercial operations, and marketing communications.

Prior to joining Corning, Hudson served in the U.S. Army for eight years as an intelligence officer.

Hudson holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Syracuse University and a Master of Business Administration degree from Babson College.

May 2018